b) Market Review & Future Outlook

(i) Equity Markets

Never before, the world faced the unprecedented scale of financial crisis in the same year after the economic slowdown, high inflation and shortage of food and fuel. The last financial year may be divided into two distinct halves. The first half of the financial year was aimed at capping inflation, driven by record high crude and industrial commodity prices while RBI tightened monetary policy to raise interest rates upto 9% on the assumption that India was more or less insulated from the global financial crisis. While there were signs of moderation in industrial growth witnessed, the same were largely attributed to high inflation translating into high input costs and high interest rates, with the global factors marginally reducing export demand. The second half, on the other hand, saw a global meltdown spreading from the developed to the emerging economies as credit supply dried up, liquidity was adversely impacted, commodity prices crashed and demand slumped with the realization dawning across governments and central banks globally that the world is heading towards a recession, deeper than was initially anticipated. Pressure on corporate profitability of Indian companies is clearly visible on account of cyclical slowdown from high inflation, high interest costs and tight credit scenario. Every economy does go through repetitive cycles of boom, slowdown and recession. Even though India is not an export-reliant economy, it is clear now that the impact of global recession is likely to be felt here too, albeit to a limited extent. Worries about earnings and global weak markets saw the Indian equity markets plunging to new lows as cumulative Index of Industrial Production (IIP) growth for April '08-February '09 stood at 2.8% compared to a massive 8.7% over the corresponding period in the previous fiscal and exports contracted in Feb '09 for the fifth consecutive month.

The Indian equity markets tumbled as weak global cues led by concerns about the future of the global economy pulled global equity markets sharply lower and as investors grew cautious on account of its likely impact on domestic economy. Wary investors, especially Foreign Institutional Investors (FIIs), continued to offload shares across-the-board as uncertainty persisted over the various bailout/stimulus plans with questions on the effectiveness of the same and on continued instability in the global banking sector. Regardless of any fundamentals, FIIs have been consistently major sellers to pull out their investments from emerging markets in an attempt to shore up resources to beat the global liquidity crunch. Interest rate sensitives such as Capital Goods, Consumer Durables, Banks, Realty along with commodities such as Oil & Gas and Metals underperformed. Only defensives such as FMCG and Pharmaceuticals outperformed as the market entered the bear zone.

Both RBI as well as government have come up with aggressive response to the unfolding scenario and the same is reflective of their commitment. In the span of just 4-5 months, the key rates have been reduced by 4-5%. Though this may not be sufficient enough to quickly reverse the economic downtrend/slump and RBI has already revised the growth estimate for FY09 to "7% with a downward bias" from its previous estimate of 8.5%, we believe that the regulatory steps should help "minimise" the impact of the global meltdown on India. Given the country's lower export dependence, the steps should lead to a faster revival in the economy as compared to most other economies. The General Elections is the next big upcoming event in 2009. Elections are an event risk. Once they are through, things should fast shift to fundamentals. After the heavy sell-off across the world, emerging markets with sound growth potential and less leveraged to the world (such as India) are already witnessing FII inflows. The World may be de-growing but India can continue to grow, especially given the Government keenness to stimulate growth.

Past economic cycles indicate that when corporate earnings and interest rates tend to bottom that is the time equity market starts to revive. We feel that if investors increase their investment into equity funds systematically now, when "most" of the price damage, at reasonably close to the price bottom is done, they should ride out the time correction to reap attractive dividends when the market turns upward again. The market will test your patience and conviction. There could be further pain in global economies and India, though in a much better position than developed countries, will still feel the pinch though to a lesser extent. While financial crises of the present nature may temper the flow of liquidity for a while but eventually, money should come around to chasing growth and returns.

(ii) Debt Markets

The world markets may be segregated in two parts- one 'before Lehman' and one 'after Lehman'. While the world before the fall of Lehman Brothers and many other big established names in the global financial industry was battling with high inflation on account of high crude oil and commodity prices, the world 'after Lehman' has been struggling to stabilize economies, fight recession, stimulate economic growth and boost credit/liquidity flow.

While developed countries were banking on slowdown to rein in inflation, RBI aggressively tightened policy as it raised repo rate by 125 basis points (1basis point = 0.01%) during April-August '08. During the second half of the year, the RBI seemed more worried about the spill-over effects of the global financial crisis on domestic asset and credit markets and thereby on domestic growth. This explains the change of stance from inflation alone to balance between inflation and growth to more growth-focused as is evident in its recent actions whereby it cut repo rate, reversed repo rate, CRR and SLR and also took various steps in order to boost liquidity, support industry and stimulate growth.

On account of sharp fall in commodity prices such as crude oil (from a high of $147 a barrel in July '08) enabling domestic government to cut fuel prices and demand slowdown, inflation has quickly moderated to near zero from a high of 12.40% as on Aug 16, 2008. The RBI, faced by an economy where the downside risks to growth have increased, has maintained a soft monetary policy stance and cut key rates on various occasions and took liquidity improvement measures causing G-secs to rally and corporate spreads to narrow. Credit growth has moderated to 18% in March '09 compared to 28% in Nov '08. The market sentiment became upbeat on account of liquidity boosting measures, aggressive interest rate cuts and sharp declines in commodity prices lending comfort on the inflation front. The 10-year benchmark g-sec rallied ~200bps during Dec 2008 to end the month close to 5%, following up on the ~150bps rally in Nov 2008.

However, the market turned cautious on the back of high fiscal deficit (due to stimulus packages announced and lower revenue collections) and resultant high government borrowings as yields shot up to 7% in March '09. Annual borrowing programme for FY09 is pegged at around Rs. 2.50 trillion against Rs.1.45 trillion scheduled earlier. Money supply growth remained at 19.7% YoY as on March 13, 2009 despite the large extra government borrowings in excess of Rs.1trillion over the last quarter of FY09. RBI has been trying to ensure smooth functioning of markets through the creative use of tools such as Open Market Operations, Market Stabilization Scheme transfer to normal Government of India borrowing account, keeping market liquidity neutral during auctions through simultaneous Open Market Opetaions buyback as alternate means to handle the excess auction supply. The RBI has indicated that it is committed to ensuring "ample" liquidity and that auctions are held in a market-friendly manner, as it sets out to borrow $2.41trillion for first Half FY10. Barring resorting to private placements which needs amendment to the FRBM Act, RBI has been implementing all possible measures to keep the yield on government bonds in check.

INR tumbled to Rs.52/USD in March '09 from around Rs.40/USD in April '08, implying a depreciation of 30% on account of fund outflows and risk aversion among investors.

Since there is little headroom for fiscal incentives to ease liquidity, monetary measures through RBI intervention is the need of the hour. Despite increased GoI borrowing and high fiscal deficit, RBI has shown firm intent to keep liquidity abundant and maintain low rates with wide range of tools at their disposal. There exists regulatory bias for lowering interest rates further, which encourages credit flow, improves liquidity and stimulate investment and consumption demand. Cyclically we remain in a low interest rate regime and there is scope for yields to decline from these levels; albeit with large volatility due to interplay of GoI paper supply on one hand and weak economy on the other.
